Promoting LOCAL FLAVOR

One Trail at a Time!

Indiana Foodways Alliance™ Helps Foodies and Travelers Find the Best Local Eateries

Since 2007 the Alliance has promoted restaurant trails winding throughout the state that are devoted to certain foods. The organization lists restaurants that serve a specific type of food, lines them up on the map by location, and encourages people to follow the trail, eating their way along. Membership requires restaurants to be locally-owned, and approved through assessments that confirm a level of quality.

Whether pies, tenderloins or ice cream are your go-to food, or something else, there is likely a trail for it. Following a food trail is a fun way to discover new-to-you establishments, taste some of the most scrumptious food and drinks around, and get motivated to explore different communities. Currently, more than 220 member food—and beverage—places in Indiana have been divided into 21 trails. The Hoosier Pie Trail™, Tenderloin Lovers

Trail, and Sweet Temptations Trail™ are most popular, and several have won awards. In 2018 the Tenderloin Lovers Trail was ranked 7th in “10 Best Food & Drink Trails in America” by PopSugar. USA Today’s “Best Food Trails in America” ranked the Hoosier Pie Trail™ 4th place in 2015 (beating out Kentucky’s Bourbon Trail), among many other awards the trails have won.

“Indiana Foodways Alliance™ (IFA) represents some of the best local food in Indiana,” said Kristal Painter, executive director of the Orange County Economic Development Partnership and president of Indiana Foodways Alliance. “It’s experiencing the food but also the story behind the food. For instance, Superburger in Paoli named their Triple Newk burger after a local teacher. Parke County’s Mecca Tavern is owned by the local football coach. Catello’s Mozzarella Bar in Pendleton is true authentic Italian and one of few places that make their own cheeses daily.”

“Most of these locally-owned restaurants started out as pipe dreams and turned into a way of life through dedication, hard work, and perseverance. In restaurant translation, that equals blood, sweat, and tears,” says Lindsey Skeen, executive director for IFA. She cites a great example in downtown Shelbyville, where 83-year-old Shirley Bailey opened the Chaperral Café more than 50 years ago. Today, Shirley still runs her restaurant with the same passion she did back in 1968.

Who We Are

Indiana Foodways Alliance™ is a statewide non-profit organization dedicated to the celebration, promotion, and preservation of the authentic food culture of Indiana.

IFA is a nonprofit run by a volunteer board of directors and trail membership continues to grow. Restaurant members pay fees to join or some area visitors bureaus pay the fees on their behalf.

“We have increased membership by 40 percent in the last two years and have projected 30-plus additional restaurants in 2019,” Skeen said.

Savor choice-cut steaks on the A Cut Above Trail™.

The organization conducts visits to the restaurant locations before a member is approved. Each member restaurant is exceptional, as determined by on-site assessments and tastings.

“We are not restaurant critics but story tellers. We meet with the owners/managers and find out the story behind the food,” Skeen said. “That’s the best part of my job, connecting with the local restaurant owners. We also find out pertinent information on the restaurant like seating, group seating, do they use locally-grown products in their food, etc. Once the restaurant or business is assessed then they are officially a member of the organization and placed on trails.”

The original seeds of IFA’s history were sown by a group known as the I-69 Cultural Corridor, founded in 1989 to promote activities to increase tourism along Interstate 69. For about fifteen years, sometimes off and on, various members worked together from visitors bureaus and other organizations in Madison, Grant, DeKalb, Allen, Huntington, Delaware and Hamilton counties. They brainstormed, tried programs to attract more tourism, conducted research, and created a long-range development and marketing plan for the corridor. Ultimately, the group was renamed and IFA was born.

Maureen Lambert, marketing and tourism director for the Anderson Madison County Visitors Bureau, was a founder of IFA and has continued to play a key role throughout the years. She's currently the IFA treasurer. "As an original member of Indiana Foodways who is still on the Board of Directors, I still have the passion for the success of this organization," Lambert said. "Culinary tourism has the potential for new product and business development in Indiana.

"Through the development of culinary trails, the components, recognition program and education of Indiana's food identity, we hope the Indiana Foodways Alliance™ will turn the Midwest's attention to food, particularly Indiana, and increase food-related tourism and the excellence in culinary pursuits across the state."

Pam Sanders has seen success due to IFA membership. Her son, Brad, owns Mecca tavern in Parke County and she helps with promotion. When she had an opportunity to join the tenderloin trail, she was hesitant.

"I kind of wondered what they could really do for us," Sanders said. "They were amazing. I thought, 'Really, do people go from restaurant to restaurant to eat tenderloin?' They do! They call."

Within a week of being listed on the Tenderloin Lovers Trail, the bar went from serving 20 tenderloins a week to 40 and has since been selling 60 to 80 per week. We started turning into a restaurant instead of a bar, thanks to the Alliance," Sanders said.

Sip delightful cocktails on the Hoosier Distillery Trail™.

And restaurants may be a deciding factor in when visitors are planning their next trip, according to Ashley Gregory, director of sales for Visit Lafayette-West Lafayette. Ashley is the former president of IFA, and is still on the Board of Directors. "Restaurants are very important to tourism," she states, "everyone wants to eat! When people travel, they always want to know where the locals eat and what food item that area is known for. Locally-owned restaurants are typically the more unique places that have that iconic food item and where the locals like to hang out. They might have a fun unique story behind the restaurant or a crazy menu item that everyone must try, whatever it is, it is something that you can't find other places. Restaurants are also a lot of times one of the first or maybe only experiences visitors have with local residents and if the food isn't good or service is bad, they may not come back to visit again."

When Ashley first started with IFA, she says the "Foodie Movement" was just starting to become a thing. "Since then," she says, "food has become huge! Everyone is talking about it, taking pictures of it and of course eating it! I think more people are traveling for food and enjoy trying different things which in turn has helped IFA grow. We now include more communities throughout Indiana, have more trails and we continue to work to get the word out about the local places."

"Tourism as a whole is a fantastic industry to work in, IFA is more focused obviously but in some ways

Every town or region does culinary tourism a little different, each has their "favorites" and passion runs deep when you talk about food.

it's focused on the best part in my opinion, the food," said Andy Rohrer, IFA Board member and vice president of sales and marketing for the Blue Gate Restaurant in Shipshewana. "Every town or region does culinary tourism a little different, each has their "favorites" and passion runs deep when you talk about food. I think that's the best part; yes eating the incredibly diverse and delicious foods, but also witnessing the passion and pride in what the owner and chef are offering!"

Experience distinctive farm-to-table cuisine on the Farm to Table Trail™.

Rohrer believes that IFA has a bright future and will continue to grow, prosper and boost state tourism.

"Food and restaurants are entering a bit of a golden age I think ...over the last few years media has glorified the chefs and establishments that are providing new and exciting food experiences," Rohrer said. "Not only in the actual food but also in the design of the space, staff, and 'story' behind the food. This has created a hunger—pardon the pun—in the culture for truly unique and wonderful food experiences, something that often the locally owned restaurant down the street or a county over can provide. IFA is in a wonderful position to provide that experience. We give access to the best of the best where discovery before was often only by luck or happenstance. The trails are our way to help tell that story." ▲

MUNCIE

Since 1941, Lowery's Homemade Candies has been serving the Muncie area, providing only the freshest, finest ingredients. They still hand-dip every single chocolate, stir the cremes in copper kettles, and pour toffee out to cool on marble slabs. And, instead of using machines to coat their candies, you'll see real people, hand-dipping the finest pecans, almonds, cherries, and their special Dark Secrets®. "Old-fashioned Quality" is at the heart of Lowery's because they are proud to make the extra effort to make their chocolates so irresistible.

SHELBY COUNTY

In Indy's inaugural Donut Day competition, Linne's Bakery and Cafe came in second with their cake donuts, but locals will tell you they are first in every category. Danishes, twists, cookies, specialty cakes, pies, and breads, you won't go wrong with any selection at Linne's. Then head out to The Bluebird for their Sugar Cream pie ... did we say melt in your mouth?

MORGAN COUNTY

Best-known for handmade candy canes, the Martinsville Candy Kitchen is a 100+-year-old icon on the courthouse square in Martinsville. Candy canes are made more frequently during the holiday season but are available throughout the year. The family-owned and operated candy shop also offers hundreds of other types of candies, an old-fashioned soda fountain, two dozen flavors of hand-dipped ice cream and seasonal pies, and other custom desserts.

VINCENNES

Pea-Fections is locally owned by a husband & wife team, both culinary graduates. This charming restaurant will satisfy any appetite with daily soups, gourmet salads, and sandwiches. Save room for one of their delicious desserts including daily dessert specials, unique cheesecakes, specialty tortes, and cakes. Pea-Fections also has a private dining room that seats 30 people, perfect for business meetings, parties, and formal get-togethers.

WHEEL HOUSE DONUTS

Plan a road trip to Wheel House Donuts, a hidden gem in friendly Rockville, Indiana. Winner of Most Creative Donuts at Indy Donut Fest 2018! Wheel House offers custom cake donuts made fresh every day. Enjoy the ambiance and the fast, free wi-fi while sipping a latte or nibbling a delicious deli sandwich. For breakfast, lunch, and donuts, Wheel House provides a winning recipe for a great experience in the heart of friendly Parke County. Fresh, delicious, friendly: It's as simple as that!

HOOSIER PIE TRAIL™

MRS. WICK'S BAKERY & CAFE

Duane "Wick" Wickersham founded Wick's 1944 with the goal of making great quality pies. Best Known for sugar cream pie Wick decided to patent his process for making it in 1962 as he ventured into larger-scale production. In 1985 he and his wife, Ruby, started Mrs. Wick's Restaurant and Bakery which makes 38 varieties of pies daily. Wick's children and grandchildren continue his tradition of making the best quality pies. Great for every occasion we believe we have a pie for everyone. From Gooseberry to Lemon Meringue and everyone's favorite Sugar Cream.

BLUE GATE RESTAURANT & BAKERY

Nothing is as fun to share and enjoy as a generous slice of homemade pie. When the Blue Gate opened in Shipshewana, it had only 50 seats, but after over 35 years, the little restaurant has become a cornerstone of Amish Country, popular because of its great food, pie, and service. Dine on their famous fried chicken, fresh from the bakery bread and of course one of their over 20 kinds of pie. The Blue Gate is also known for their entertainment, so pair your dinner with a concert or musical for a great time!

HENDRICKS COUNTY

One of the best stops along this trail can be found in the center of Hendricks County in Danville, Indiana, at the popular Bread Basket Cafe & Bakery. Owned by a mother-daughter team, this refurbished bungalow provides the perfect setting for this cozy, nationally renowned eatery. Serving breakfast and lunch, its menu features soups, salads, sandwiches, breads, and locally roasted coffee beans and teas with a bakery known for decadent desserts, including a vast array of cinnamon rolls, cakes and pies, and even mini versions known as Sweetie Pies and Baby Cakes.

PARKE COUNTY

Friendly service, generous portions, and made-from-scratch desserts are all trademarks of the Parke County restaurant scene. Two standouts—each known for their delicious pies—are Montezuma Grill and the Narrows Inn at Turkey Run State Park. Montezuma Grill takes pride in all their homemade desserts, but many patrons come just for the pies. Flavors can vary, but two of the most popular are butterscotch and chocolate. At the Narrows Inn, located at Turkey Run State Park, their family dining menu features home-style meals of Indiana favorites. So it's no surprise their menu includes two Hoosier traditions—sugar cream pie and pecan pie.

Started by a father and his sons, Bad Dad Brewing Co. is a family affair. Craft beer is lovingly created with Dad-ism inspired names like Socks & Sandals Ale, When I Was Your Age wheat beer, You're Grounded, Mister stout, and I'll Turn This Car Around pale ale on tap. Delicious appetizers include house-baked bread and charcuterie trays. Baked in a wood-fired brick oven, their Neapolitan-inspired pies feature an in-house made dough. Voted "Best Indiana Brewery" by travelers at Visit Indiana in 2019.

MONTGOMERY COUNTY

The Backstep Brewing Company was founded in April of 2016 when two career firefighters took a chance on a run-down dive bar and abandoned prohibition-era hotel.

Co-founders Jim Boros and Patrick Pennington not only worked on the same fire engine but also shared a passion for all things craft beer. What started out as a fun hobby and pastime, eventually turned into starting their own brewery and taproom.

HOOSIER DISTILLERY TRAIL™

SOIN-CLARK/FLOYD COUNTIES

Starlight Distillery in Borden has its roots—quite literally—in agriculture and family heritage. Located on the 600-acre farm at Huber's Orchard & Winery, Starlight Distillery has been owned and operated by a sixth-generation Huber since 2001. The Master Distillers take a grain-to-glass approach in producing a variety of Bourbon, Whiskey, Gin, Vodka, and Brandy, so there is something for everyone! Visitors can take in a behind-the-scenes tour and enjoy a tasting of any number of high-quality spirits before enjoying the rest the farm has to offer.

FRENCH LICK-WEST BADEN

A true artisan distillery where their devotion is presenting the world a truly agrarian spirit built from the ground up in Indiana. Spirits of French Lick mill all their own grains on site, with as much passion for the raw materials as for the finished products. Their only rule: "Respect the Grain." Featuring some unique spirits including Aquavit, Old Tom Gin, Absinthe Le Blue, Blackberry Eau-De-Vie, Vodka, Bourbon, and more.
